The Two National Conventions.

CHARLESTON, South Carolina, is the place and the 23d of April the day, for holding the Democratic National Convention to nominate candidates for President and Vice President. The Republican National Committee meet in New York, next week, to fix the time and place of holding the Republican National Convention. The time, we trust, will be as early as the first of May, and the place either Indianapolis or Cincinnati.

WHIMSIES OF THE ULTRAISTS.—Under this head, the Rochester Union, (a Democratic paper) speaks as follows. Its editor, like a sensible man, does not think that the election of a Republican Speaker would justify a dissolution of the Union; and rebukes the Administration organ at Washington for thinking otherwise. It says:

"The Washington Constitution contains an article of the genus "scare," to the effect that the election of a Republican Speaker of the House of Representatives will prove the straw to break the camel's back—that such election will put an end to the Union! At this crisis in public affairs, the Constitution avers, a Republican Speaker would not be tolerated by the South; but that on the contrary, the Members of that section would act up for themselves. Now, if the Union is so nearly broken as that, the peaceful and unquestionably legitimate and constitutional exercise of their rights, by Members of Congress of any political party—especially when their action contemplates no aggression, but is limited to the necessary organization of the House—will rend it asunder, it is not worth the cement it will require to hold it together. Such ridiculous effusions, proceeding from official organs, utterly destroy their influence with men of sense, and make them a laughing stock for the amusement of the whole country."

CUI BONO.—The object of Gov. WISE, in making such a tremendous military display at Charlestown, is, he states it truly, a significant one. The telegraph makes him say, that it was not that he feared any attempt to rescue BROWN, but solely to arouse a military feeling throughout the State. Now, what is that for? Is it to get Virginia ready for the "good time coming," promised by the Richmond Enquirer? Is it to prepare to march on Washington, one year hence, provided an Opposition President is elected? Such was his programme in 1856, as declared by Mr. BANKS of Virginia and others.

THE NEXT PRESIDENCY.—The St. Paul Daily Times thus speaks for the Republicans of Minnesota:

Senator Seward is not only indicated by the Republican party as its great representative, but the Democracy, from one end of the land to the other, have pointed him out as the peculiar object of their attack, as the representative man of our party—the man they fear. They are not mistaken; Mr. Seward is the man, the Napoleon of the Republican party. In his long, able and consistent career as a Statesman, the South sees no hope of apostacy; he is no "Northern man with Southern principles." He is incorruptible—the man for the time—true to the North, just to the South. The Republican party cannot afford to confide its cause to new and untried hands. We have veterans in our ranks—give us this veteran—place him at our head.

LAST WORDS OF JOHN BROWN.—The Philadelphia Inquirer, a cautious and conservative paper, whose reporters may have had the needed facilities at the execution, gives the following as the last words of JOHN BROWN:

"He was understood to say:—'I die alone responsible for my own operations, and ask for no sympathy. I am satisfied in my own belief—but desire no other man to believe as I do, unless his conscience and philosophy approve. I am singly responsible for my own acts, good or bad. If right or wrong, the consequence rests only upon myself.'"

HEAVY ROBBERY AT DELEVAN.—We learn from the Northron that on last Wednesday night the warehouse of JOHNSON & BETTS, at Delevan, was broken open and six hundred and seventy dollars stolen from the safe.—The thief had previously entered the house of Mr. Johnson on Sixth street and abstracted from his coat off pantaloons the key to the safe. The Northron makes use of the following dubious sentence in relation thereto: "It ought to be no stigma against an innocent man that he happened to be in the neighborhood of such a robbery; which may be consistent with the most elevated character."

CAN MEN BE COMPELLED TO WORD AT A FIRE?—The Fire Warden of the Third Ward, in St. Paul, recently commanded a looker-on at a fire to go to work on one of the engines. The individual demurred. The Warden threatened, and the individual went to work; but afterwards had the Warden arrested. Judge SIMONS, before whom the case was brought, decided it a case of assault, and fined the Warden $8, although he plead that the Fire Ordinance empowered to do as he had done.

Wood, (Anti-Tammany)	80,054
Havemeyer (Tammany)	26,781
Opdyke (Republican)	21,000

Havemeyer received several thousand Republican votes.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT.—We hasten to give our fair readers information of the fact that the ladies of Vienna have initiated the fashion of taking off their gloves, as soon as they enter the opera or drawing room. We hope that none who aspire to perfection in the Old World etiquette will be neglectful or forgetful of this important change.

ALL the dry goods stores in Detroit are to be closed during the winter months, by mutual consent, at 7 P. M., to allow the clerks a few hours for recreation and improvement.

ACCIDENT TO A MINISTER.—Rev. Mr. LATTIN of Beloit; pastor of the Methodist Church accidently severed an artery in his foot with an axe last week. He is recovering.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE CONFLICT IN IOWA.—Eleven Democratic papers in Iowa, have suspended since the election in that State in October.

THE Winona Review states that Lake Pepin is firmly frozen over, so that teams cross at all hours.

The State of Wisconsin vs The United States.

We regret to be obliged to chronicle another collision between the eminently respectable principalities whose names make luminous the entitling of this paragraph.

On Friday last, the United States Marshal attached and stored in the Kunals House for safe keeping a quantity of goods belonging to one of our city merchants, by virtue of a writ issuing from the United States District Court at Milwaukee. The goods were at once replevined by a process issuing from the Circuit Court of Wisconsin.

Upon being served with the latter process, the Marshal, prompted by his attorney who accompanied from Milwaukee replied that he was acting under the direction of a court of higher jurisdiction and should not regard the mandates or officers of a simple State Court.

Whereupon deputy Sheriff Stebbins waxed exceeding wroth as because a thorough State-Rights Republican, and calling to his assistance the power of the county proceeded to the annihilation of the Marshal. The power of the County, in the person of the eminent pugilist Kellogg at once responded; was collared by the Marshal and the combat began. For a time the victory seemed doubtful and at the conclusion of the twelfth round the Marshal's adviser essayed to pour oil upon the troubled waters. "Gentlemen!" said he, "the County which has ever existed and should ever exist between courts of different jurisdictions!"—here he was interrupted by the lauding of the Marshal and "the power of the county" under the stove, and the remainder of his speech is probably lost to the world.

The belligerents now paused for breath; the Marshal stationed himself before the door of the room containing the goods and a messenger was dispatched to his lords (see Matt. 8. 20. Luke 9. 58,) for the Sheriff.

Mr. Fox soon arrived—both parties proceeded to obey the familiar mandate of the bard of Jordon, and "to take off their coats and to roll up their sleeves."

"In the name of the United States I command every good citizen to assist me in guarding those goods," exclaimed the valiant representative of our well beloved Uncle Sam.

"In the name of the State of Wisconsin I command every good citizen to assist me in taking those goods," shouted the Sheriff.—The good citizens, i. e. Strong and Veasie being thus doubly summoned, remained in statu quo twirling their thumbs in great perplexity; Strong swore inwardly, Veasie outwardly.

The Marshal, when last seen by our reporter, was clasped in the embrace of the Sheriff and his deputy, his heels twinkling over his head, his head in the immediate neighborhood of the floor, yet even under these most unfavorable circumstances, kicking, swearing and performing divers other prodigies of inverted valor. We learn, however, that the State of Wisconsin triumphed and that the goods have been safely delivered to the owner.—Kenosha Tribune.

Correspondence of the New York Evening Post.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5, 1859.

Notwithstanding the panic in Virginia, and nearly all the southern newspapers over John Brown, it is a noticeable fact that the members of Congress are as cordial and social as ever. Senator Wilson may be seen laughing with Governor Brown at the National, and Colfax with Barksdale, as if Brown's carpet bag had never been opened or Helper's pamphlet never been printed. The world, or the Union, therefore, will not come to an end just yet.

The best joke about Harper's Ferry is laid at the door of Thaddeus Stevens. He was talking up "the invasion" at one of our hotels the other evening to a southern friend.—Southerner waxed hot, and declared that John Brown, "d—n him, deserved a dozen hangings."

"Yes," said Thaddeus, in his solemn, drawling style, "yes, you are right. He deserves hanging: he only brought down seventeen men—if he had brought thirty he would have settled the slavery question for ever!"

Mr. Greeley, of the Tribune, and Mr. Weed, of the Journal have been Republican "lions" here for a couple of days, and such is the reputation this way of the last named gentleman, that certain Democrats feel like Scott's coon, that the game is up, and that they might as well descend without a shot.

AN INQUEST—A REVOLTING SPECTACLE.—Yesterday afternoon Coroner James was called to a miserable and squalid den at No. 121 South Canal street in the West Division, to hold an inquest on the body of a young girl of eighteen, Margaret O'Brien, who died yesterday morning in a stupor following a frightful attack of delirium tremens. She has been an abandoned character, and recently in a most desperate state of mind; and the people with whom she lived, a mixed community of colored and Irish of the lowest class, being wretchedly poor, she has doubtless suffered for lack of food. Whisky of the strychnine description was plenty, and the miserable girl has partaken of this fiery beverage freely of late, keeping herself under its influence throughout the entire week past.—On Wednesday night she was a sufferer from the most distressing form of delirium tremens, demon-haunted, and shrieking as if already among the lost. Actual danger was experienced by the household, so violent and almost superhuman were her paroxysms.—Death kindly put an end to her earthly sufferings.

The case is a most singular one, that such a death should overtake a girl not yet out of her teens. The spectacle presented at the inquest yesterday, the corpse and its surroundings, was most revolting. The remains, blackened and disfigured by the last mortal agonies; Mrs. Peaseley, the occupant of the wretched tenement, with her black infant in her arms, furniture the most wretched; everything meagre except dirt and filth; persons of both sexes and all colors sharing in an indiscriminate herd the accommodations of that den,—and all this in the neighborhood of the happy homes of the West Division. Of a verity 'one half the world knows not how the other half lives.'" We have a heathen population in Chicago that are in no whit behind the Polynesian standard, and perhaps to lift the veil occasionally will do no harm, in the startling contrasts thus given, in the misses of our city life.—Chicago Press & Tribune, 9th.

CROSSING.—Travelers were crossing the Mississippi at all points in this region yesterday. The Stage Company will take over the mails and baggage to-day, with horses. The ice has become firm, and no doubts are entertained of its efficiency.

ICE BOAT.—The boys are getting the steam up on the ice boat at Prairie du Chien. They will make a few trial trips this week, and if the weather don't play Hollis, they will start for La Crosse next Monday. All the world is awaiting the result.

SHARP.—The thermometer ran sixteen degrees below zero yesterday morning, which was six degrees below the "cold snap" of Friday.

GOOD TIME.—The St. Paul stages came in last evening at 3 o'clock, bringing sixteen passengers. They report the weather northward twenty degrees below zero, yesterday morning.

CENTENARY OF AMERICAN METHODISM.—The one hundredth Anniversary of the introduction of Methodism into the United States is to be appropriately celebrated by the denomination. The Christian Advocate says:

The true centenary of Methodism is in the year 1860, Dr. Roberts, of Baltimore has fully demonstrated the fact from local as well as general documents, and other evidences.—The late Local Preachers' convention, at Baltimore, appointed a committee to consult the general conference respecting measures for its due observance. It is a happy coincidence that the general conference meets in this grand epochal year. It will be not, indeed, the centennial conference. But is will be the centenary general conference.

AT THE lowest calculation, it is said, not less than 29,000,000 immoral publications are issued from the British press. In the year 1851, the purely infidel press of London issued publication to the amount of more than 12,000,000; the issues of avowed atheism during the same period exceeded 640,000; in addition to these were issued 12,000,000 of a negative or corrupting character; and these are exclusive of what are properly denominated newspapers.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF MR. CAMPAU.—As yet no further tidings have been received of Mr. Barney Campau, nor have any clues been obtained that point to any solution of his singular disappearance. The river has been carefully dragged along the entire front of the city, without success. The very liberal reward of $500 has as yet failed to produce the slightest information.—Detroit Free Press, Dec. 8.

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

Special Dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7, 1859.

The first two days of the session of Congress have shown that the Opposition can control the organization of the House, whenever the Administration party ceases its factious filibustering to prevent that result.—Mr. Sherman will probably be elected on the next trial; but whether the furious Southern Democracy, who are strong enough to obstruct business, will permit that to take place to-day, to-morrow, or next month, is at this time a matter entirely in uncertainty.

The amount of buncombe of which they have been delivered themselves during these two or three days, ought to satisfy them, that until the House is organized, such debates are clearly out of place, and the Republicans have acted wisely in leaving the business to their opponents, after vain attempts to check it. A very foolish demonstration was made yesterday by Mr Crawford, of Georgia, backed by a number of armed fellows, against Mr. Stevens, of Pennsylvania, who rose to insist that these debates of general resolutions were out of order. The ruffian advance was promptly met on the Opposition side. At one time a serious outbreak seemed inevitable. The effect of this affair has been decidedly favorable to the Opposition, and the Administration men are now ashamed and disposed to apologize.

They affect a great deal of furious zeal in behalf of their peculiar cause, but intimidate nobody and will certainly get the worst of it if they begin in a physical encounter. Mr. Stevens is one of the oldest of the Republicans and will prove a constant thorn in the side of the fire-eating faction whose bluster he treats with merited indifference. A few pointed words from him yesterday were of more effect than all the labored speeches from the other side of the House. He is a good tactician and will do for a leader. Keitt succeeded in airing his vocabulary yesterday, much to his own gratification. He talked of shivering the universe from pinnacle to foundation. He is the best specimen of a ranter I remember to have heard anywhere unless on the stage.

Leake, Milson and Garnett, of Va., tried to give the House an illustration of the prevalent rabbles in the Old Dominion, and one of them, Milson, even professed to think that a deliberate endorser of the wicked Helper book was unfit to live. His extravagance found applause in the galleries.

One of the pleasantest things of yesterday was the admirable manner in which Gilmer, of North Carolina, Southern Opposition, turned the flank of the enemy, by offering an anti-agitation substitute for J. B. Clark's shallow resolution concerning Helper's Compendium. This manoeuver fixed the burden of agitation upon the Democracy, and left the result of the day's skirmishing a decided loss to the Administration disorganizers.

ENORMOUS GROWTH OF THE TAPE WORM.—A very remarkable fact in relation to the value of an organ, egg—or mucilage of squash seeds, in expelling that really frightful and singularly organized worm, which takes possession of the stomach and intestines, occurred a few days since in the neighborhood of Boston. A lady who had suffered exceedingly from the presence of this parasite, guided principally by the printed directions given by Mr Richard Soule, Esq., of this city, who has been untiring in his humane efforts to make the remedy known, has good reason for believing that she finally triumphed, and is now free from further annoyance in that respect. Her husband stated to a physician on Wednesday, that he saw a thousand feet of tape-worm had been voided by taking the new preparation. One hundred feet have on several occasions been expelled, after taking a dose. From an inspection of portions preserved in alcohol, it seems probable that several worms of uncommon length have existed in the intestinal tube at the same time. The annals of medicine hardly present a parallel in this or any other country.

A CHILD KILLED AND PARTIALLY DEVOURED BY A PIG.—A terrible circumstance occurred in Arnprior village, on Tuesday last, the 22d inst., almost too painful for description. A widow of the name of Kennedy, had occasion to leave her home on the afternoon in question on some business in the village, entrusting the care of the house and her little daughter (about 17 months old) to her son, a boy of about seven or eight years. On her return imagine the horror of the scene she beheld. Her little girl lay on the floor in the agonies of death, and a pig in the act of devouring the body. The details are too sickening for publication—one arm and part of the face of the child being consumed. The pig, which belonged to the unhappy woman, was, of course, immediately shot; but, alas! too late to prevent the heartrending result. It is stated that the child was attacked by the same ferocious brute about two weeks since, gnawing the hands of the poor helpless infant.—Ottawa (Canada) Union.

NECESSITY OF RELAXATION.—Bayard Taylor says—and truly—in one respect we might probably imitate the Germans. Our sorest need, as a people, is recreation—relaxation of the everlasting tension of our laborious lives. Among our Teutonic cousins, a certain amount of recreation, public as well as domestic, is part of the plan of every man's life. The poorest laborer has his share—must have it—and the tread-mill round of his years is brightened and sweetened by it. Our seasons of recreation being so rare, too frequently take the character of excess.—They are characterized by the same hurry and fury with which we prosecute our business. If we shall ever intercolate regular periods of genial relaxation in our working calendar, we shall be a healthier and happier people than we are now.

ACTION FOR HEAVY DAMAGES.—The San Francisco Herald states that Mr. Elnathan L. Sanderson has commenced an action against the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, claiming thirty thousand dollars damages.—The alleged grounds of complaint are, that the plaintiff in November, 1855, being a practicing attorney, took passage for himself and wife on the steamship Sonora, for New York. On arriving at Aspinwall a detention of fifteen days took place, in consequence of there being no vessel in readiness to convey the passengers from that port.—Plaintiff was attacked by the fever peculiar to the Isthmus, from which he has never recovered, and from the effects of which his wife died in May, 1856. For the damage caused to his health caused by detention at Aspinwall, the plaintiff claims thirty thousand dollars.

FISHING.—The fish are coming into the bay, and our fishermen are busy taking and barreling them for shipping early in the spring. They expect to realize a handsome profit. We have no doubt but they will.—Early last spring they brought $8 per bbl.—There are now about 300 nets in the bay.—All that men have to do is to walk from their houses down to the beach, get into their boats, go out to the deep water, a half mile, less or more, drop their nets and take others up, which sometimes contain barrels. How convenient is our fishing, of which it was said the other day, "it will become an immense business." This week we saw a trout that weighed 23 pounds. This is small, in comparison with some that are taken.—Bayfield Press.

DEATH FROM A CUP OF COFFEE.—Last Sunday morning a melancholy and grievous accident took place at the house of Mr. and Mrs. A. Seaver, who had just sat down to breakfast, with their little boy, about six months old, whom they had fastened in a child's chair close up to the table, and while the father was in the act of taking a knife from the little one's hand, which he had taken off the table, fearful that he might cut himself with it, when the child made a spring at a cup of hot coffee, the contents of which unfortunately, were capsized down his breast and stomach, scalding him so badly that death ensued in less than ten minutes.—Jeffersonian, 8th.

CRAWFORD COUNTY FINANCES.—The total liabilities of Crawford County for the year closing with the time of adjournment of the County Board in November, amounted to $16,421.67. The assets or available sources of revenue on hand consists of $11,098.33, mostly in tax certificates. The Board resolved to levy a tax on the assessed value of real and personal property amounting to $1,009,392, which will yield a little over $7,000.

SCARLET FEVER.—This disease, usually so fatal among children, is prevailing to considerable extent in this city—some eight or ten children having died within a few days. It is a somewhat singular circumstance that this disease should have so long a time known to medical men without a certain remedy having been found. Among those attacked by this disease, eight or ten died.—Sheboygan Journal.

THE BAZAAR.—We desire to compliment the Irishman and Biddy who occupy—we think it is "Pat Murphy's,"—the stand nearest the door. Pat has that suave and convalescent method of expressing his peculiar ideas which always makes a broth of a boy. It is one thing to put on a pair of knee breeches and hold a short pipe "betwane" one's teeth while one makes a rale Tipperary flourish with the shillelah, and it is another thing to have an Irishman's quick wit, ready humor, unaffected politeness and geniality; it is one thing to dress up like an Irishman, and another thing to represent and sustain the character. We haven't the honor of Pat's acquaintance, but if there's "are a job" that we can help him to, from sawing our wood to licking Clodius occasionally, he's just the jolly "Mark Tapley" that we'd like to have do it. We saw Biddy fill his dhudeen for him last night, and light it for him and then slap his face because he paid her too strong a compliment.

We shall go down to-night just to see the same thing repeated. To-night the drawing of the prizes takes place. And this afternoon, to accommodate the ladies and allow them, as the Wisconsin says, to get within "cuging" distance (a phraze by the way that we cannot find in Euclid or Crocket) an extra representation will be given at 2 o'clock. Admittance ten cents.

"The Walworth County Sovereign, Vol. 1, No. 2," comes to us from Delevan. It is a small, snug clipper, bearing G. W. D. ANDREWS on its manifest. The Sovereign was built in a Democratic yard and launched for Democratic service—but all that to the contrary we propose to say that it is a most creditable specimen of the craft, better printed than a great many papers in our State, filled with readable matter—of course we don't allude to the leader, for how could anything Democratic be readable—and promises—if intelligence and enterprise are anything, to run well, not only for a season but for several—perhaps for all time—who knows. We like to welcome a bright, well arranged, correctly made up newspaper to our sanctum and especially from our own State—The Sovereign is such. How d'ye do?

THE Y. M. C. A AND HARPER'S WEEKLY.—Mr. Editor,—It seems by the Wisconsin of Thursday evening, that this Association has finally entered the political arena. We presume its name will be changed to suit its new vocation. It is unfortunate that there are in all Milwaukee no avenues of Christain activity open to this Association.—Surely the Millenium will soon dawn upon the world and JOE MILLER be canonized as a saint.

The verdict of the public should, however, be withheld. Probably not more than twenty members were present at the meeting, and this fact strips the unanimous vote of all significance. It cannot be possible that any considerable number of the sober and intelligent members will sanction or approve of the exclusion of Harper's Weekly from the Reading Room, because of its Harper's Ferry articles, and illustrations. If the Association does not recede from this position, its strength will be seriously impaired. Already we hear of intended withdrawals and of projects for a new Association.

AN ACTIVE MEMBER.

A SKATING CLUB.—It is announced that several young ladies and gentlemen have formed a skating club. We hope they or it will not fall through. We want to see a picturesque panorama of graceful dears whizzing about like Peris under the shadows of the warehouses on the moonlight nights.—We want to hear soprano voices where the shrieks of the tug was wont to harrow up our souls. Let them slide, either in short dresses or long, either in mousseline de laine or corduroy. The presence of some of our pretty girls on our river, would turn the ice to ice-cream, and the delights of skating to the pleasures of Elysium.

THROUGH the politeness of R. B. LYNCH, City Clerk, we are able to give our readers the Valuation of the Real and Personal property of the City of Milwaukee for the year A. D. 1859, for General City, State, County, School and Ward taxes:

MAD DOGS.—We are assured by a respectable citizen that no less than thirteen children have been bitten by mad dogs, in the Sixth and Ninth Wards, within the past few days. Our informant adds that the Ordinance passed by the Common Council, providing for the destruction of dogs, running at large, unmuzzled, is illegal and cannot be enforced, and he wishes us to urge upon the Council the necessity of more effectual provision on the subject.

New Publications.

GERMANY, by Madame the Baroness DE STAEL HOLSTEIN, with Notes and Appendices by O. W. WIGHT, A. M., in 2 vol. New York, DERBY & JACKSON.

Sir JAMES MACKINTOSH called this book "the greatest production of female genius." Perhaps if Sir JAMES lived in our times his opinion would be somewhat modified, and yet we know of no female writer in the annals of literature who ever attained to the "masculine eminence" of Madame DE STAEL. Her vigor of mind was only equal to her love of liberty. If her "Germany" is not her greatest work aesthetically, it is, at least, her most popular, and we dare assert, her most enduring work. Madame DE STAEL's productions were long since classed among the highest and best efforts of human genius, and we greet this republication of them by DERBY & JACKSON with pleasure. There is no reason now why any library should be without them.

In looking over this excellent translation we find many passages that we have marked—for their truth perspicuity and beauty—with our pencil, but our space will admit but a few:

CONVERSATION.

"That sort of pleasure, which is produced by an animated conversation, does not precisely depend on the nature of that conversation; the ideas and knowledge which it develops do not form its principal interest; it is a certain manner of acting upon one another; of giving mutual and instant delight; of speaking the moment one thinks of acquiring immediate self-enjoyment; of receiving applause without labor; of displaying the understanding in all its shades by accent, gesture, look; of eliciting, in short, at will, the electric sparks which relieve some of the excess of their vivacity and serve to awaken others out of a state of painful apathy."

KLOPSTOCK.

The aim of all his works is either to awaken patriotism in his country, or to celebrate religion. If poetry had its saints, Klopstock would certainly be one of the first of them.

The greater parts of his odes may be considered as christian psalms; Klopstock is the David of the NEW Testament; but that which honors his character above all, without speaking of his genius, is a religious hymn, under the form of an epic poem, called the Messias, to which he devoted twenty years. The Christian world already possessed two poems, the Inferno of Dante, and Milton's Paradise Lost; one was full of images and phantoms, like the external religion of the Italians.

Milton, who had lived in the midst of civil wars, above all excelled in the painting of his characters; and his Latin is a gigantic cable, armed against the monarchy of Heaven. Klopstock has conceived the Christian sentiment in all its purity; he consecrated his soul to the divine Saviour of men. The fathers of the Church inspired Dante; the Bible inspired Milton; the greatest beauties of Klopstock's poem are derived from the New Testament; from the divine simplicity of the Gospel, he knew how to draw a charming strain of poetry, which does not lessen its purity. In beginning this poem it seems as if we were entering a great church, in the midst of which an organ is heard; and that tender emotion, that devout meditation, which inspires us in our christian temples also pervade the soul as we read the Messias. Klopstock, in his youth, proposed to himself this poem as the object and end of his existance.

GOETHE AND SCHILLER.

Their writings are the perfect resemblances of their character and conversation. This very rare concordance is a proof of sincerity. When the first object in writing is to produce an effect upon others, a man never displays himself to them, such as he is in reality; but when he writes to satisfy an internal inspiration which has obtained possession of the soul, he discovers by his works, even without intending it, the very slightest shades of his manner of thinking and acting.

GERMAN POETRY AND PROSE.

The German is better adapted for poetry than prose, and its prose is better in writing than in speaking; it is an instrument which answers very well when one desires to describe or unfold every thing; but we cannot in German, as in French, endeavor to adopt German phrases to the train of French conversation, it is to strip them of all grace and dignity. The great merit of Germans is that of filling up their time well; the art of the French is to make it pass unnoticed.

This work forms two volumes of the series of French classics published in uniform style, and at a moderate price, by Messrs. DERBY & JACKSON, including Montaigne, Fenelon, Paschal, Voltaire, La Fountain and Chateaubriand's complete works. Literary men, students and lovers of good reading, would do well to send for a catalogue and look over the list.

MILWAUKEE MERCHANTS AT BELOIT.—H. O. Wilson, General Agent of the Detroit & Milwaukee R. R.; P. A. Hall, Supt. of the Lake Shore Road; Robt. Harris, Supt., and Mr. Taylor, Asst. Genl. Manager of the Racine Road; W. E. Cramer, of the Daily Wisconsin; E. J. Nazro, L. H. Kellogg, and several other gentlemen representing the various business interests of Milwaukee, were in town yesterday.

The names of these gentlemen are all prominent in business circles, and they comprised altogether a distinguished representation from the metropolis of the State, and such a one as our city will be at all times happy to welcome.

In this connection we would say that the merchants of Milwaukee propose to offer superior advantages of trade, which our dealers will doubtless be ready to improve. The means of communication with that point have been largely extended, and every facility for transportation is offered.

The Detroit and Milwaukee R. R. has already gained a high reputation for safety and despatch, as a transportation line, giving Milwaukee unexcelled advantages as a shipping point. As a grain port it has always justly had the preference in the Eastern markets. We would gladly see the business relations of merchants in this direction with those of Milwaukee, largely extended, and without doubt such a result would prove mutually advantageous to both sections.—Beloit Herald & Times.

Senator Tumbull's Defence of the Republican Party.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9—3 P. M.

SENATE—In the Senate yesterday, Senator Trumbull made a lengthy speech, chiefly in defence of the Republican party in the course of which Mr. Trumbull contended that the declaration of Mr. Seward was nothing more than the views expressed by Washington, and the Southern men in 1798. He also quoted the language of Jefferson, that there is nothing more certainly written in the book of fate than that these races should be free. It would be seen then that the idea was not now and it had its origin in Virginia years ago. The idea foreshadowed by Jefferson, although not a part of the creed of the Republican party, he trusted it might hereafter become its creed, that is, the deportation of the free negro population from the country. He trusted the Republican party would make it a part of their creed to procure some region of country not far distant to which the negro population could be taken. He feared the consequences of Jefferson's prophecy, unless this was done. He quoted from a speech of Henry Clay, advocating colonization.

In conclusion, Mr. Trumbull said: It seems to me impracticable to RUFUS KING, EDITOR.

SATURDAY MORNING, DEC. 10, 1859.

"Agitate, Agitate, Agitate!"

Both branches of Congress have consumed the first four days of the session in an angry, idle and unprofitable debate about Slavery, to the delay of the organization of the House and the exclusion of the legitimate business of the National Legislature. The "agitation," in each House, was initiated by the Democrats, and for political purposes solely. In the Senate, Mr. MASON, of Virginia, demands a Committee of Inquiry into the Harper's Ferry affair, in the absurd expectation of implicating the Republicans, as a party, in JOHN BROWN's scheme to liberate the slaves. In the House, Mr. CLARK, of Missouri, demands that every Republican, shall be ostracised, who believes in the "irrepressible conflict," and has recommended, or read, HELPER's book on the "impending crisis in the South." How long this useless and exciting debate is to be protracted, remains for the Democrats to say. Meanwhile it is instructive to remark" that no word of censure escapes from the Democratic press, for this unnecessary waste of time and useless talk. "Agitation" for slavery is all right, it seems, in their estimation. But "agitation" for FREEDOM is "sectional," "disorganizing" and "dangerous to the Union."

John Brown and the Doyles.

The News of yesterday publishes a letter from MAHALA DOYLE, widow of JOHN DOYLE, who was killed in the Border Ruffian invasion of Kansas, charging the murder upon JOHN BROWN. The utter falsity of the charge has been again and again fully proven. The letter of Mr. HINTON, which we copied yesterday from the Boston Traveller, conclusively shows that JOHN BROWN was miles away from the scene, when DOYLE was killed.—The writer further testifies, as to the character of DOYLE, as follows:

> It was inferred in your article that Doyle was a peaceable citizen, though a pro-slavery man. Let me say that in Kansas no one presumes to make such a statement. He not only was a pro-slavery man, but a ruffian of the most malignant stamp. All of those kind were members of an active gang of ruffians, who made their head-quarters in that neighborhood.

Doyle was engaged with others in a fiendish attempt to outrage the persons of Captain Brown's daughter (the wife of Thompson, who, while a prisoner in the hands of the chivalry of Virginia, was also brutally butchered) and of his daughter-in-law, the wife of one of Brown's sons.

Here was ample provocation for BROWN to shoot DOYLE, and had he done so, no jury would ever have brought in a verdict against him.

As to the present version of the story given by Mrs. DOYLE, the Boston Journal, of Friday, states that it has the original affidavit made by this Blood-thirsty Mrs. DOYLE in regard to the Pottawatomie murders, and that she does not even refer to Brown as in any manner connected with the affair. And if she had, the public would want some better evidence of the fact than that of a woman inflamed by such deadly hatred as she shows for him. The charge is undoubtedly an after-thought, and the letter concocted by some of the Tennessee slaveholders, to increase the hatred of the "chivalry" for BROWN.

It is a significant fact, by the way, that the News suppresses a characteristic phrase in Mr. DOYLE's letter. As published in the News, the postscript reads thus:

> N. B.—My son, John Doyle, whose life I begged of (you) is now grown up, and is very desirous to be living in Charlestown on the day of your execution, and would certainly be there if his means would permit.
> M. DOYLE.

As it first appeared in the Baltimore Sun, the postscript read as follows:

> "N. B.—My son, John Doyle, whose life I begged of you, is now grown up, and is very desirous to be at Charlestown on the day of your execution; would certainly be there if his means would permit. But he might adjust the rope around your neck." If Governor Wise would permit. M. D."

We do not wonder that the News, Detroit Free Press, and other Doughface organs suppress this savage and blood thirsty paragraph in Mrs. DOYLE's letter. It is a little too much even for them; though the News professes to admire the "spirit which breathes in the letter of this desolate woman."

Thomas Jefferson on Slavery.

Since the Democrats in the House of Representatives have undertaken to establish a censorship, and propose to ostracise all who endorse "Helper's Impending Crisis of the South," their attention has been directed to another incendiary publication of the same sort, which has had extensive circulation in the South. We refer to JEFFERSON's "Notes on Virginia," wherein may be found (pp. 403-404, Vol. VIII,) the following eloquent denunciation of Slavery:

> "There must doubtless be an unhappy influence on the manners of our people produced by the existence of slavery among us. The whole commerce between master and slave is a perpetual exercise of the most boisterous passions and most unremitting despotism on the one part, and degrading submissions on the other. Our children see this and learn to imitate it; for man is an imitative animal. This quality is the germ of all education in him. From his cradle to his grave he is learning to do what he sees others do. If a parent could find no motive either in his philanthrophy or his self love for restraining the intemperance of passion towards his slave, it should always be a sufficient one that his child is present. But generally it is not sufficient. The parent storms, the child looks on, catches the lineaments of wrath, puts on the same airs in the circle of smaller slaves, gives a loose rein to the worst of passions, and thus nursed, educated and daily exercised in tyranny, cannot but be stamped by it with odious peculiarities. The man must be a prodigy who can retain his manners and morals undepraved by such circumstances. And with what execration must the statesman be loaded, who, permitting one-half the citizens thus to trample on the rights of the other, transforms those into despots, and these into enemies, destroys the morals of the one part and the amor patria of the other—For if the slave can have a country in this world, it must be any other than that in which he is born to live and labor for another; in which he must look up the faculties of his nature, contribute as far as depends on his individual endeavors to the evanishment of the human race, or entail his own miserable condition on the endless generations proceeding from him. With the morals of the people, their industry is also destroyed. For in a warm climate no man will labor for himself who can make another labor for him.—This is so true that of the proprietors of slaves a very small proportion, indeed, are ever seen to labor. And can the liberties of a nation be thought secure when we have removed their only firm basis—a conviction in the minds of the people that these liberties are the gift of God? That they are not to be violated but with his wrath? Indeed, I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just; that his justice cannot sleep forever; [illegible] numbers, nature, and natural [illegible] evolution of the wheel of fortune, an exchange of situation, are among [illegible] possible events; that it may become [illegible] probable by supernatural interference! The Almighty has no attribute which [illegible] can take side with us in such a contest. [illegible] The way, I hope, is preparing, under the auspices of Heaven, for a total emancipation, and that this is disposed in the order of events, to be with the consent of the masters, rather than by their extirpation."

GAG LAW AT THE GALLOWS.—The following is a copy of the letter, written by "Major General W. B. TALLIAFERRO," commanding the 2,500 F. F. V's, who assisted at the hanging of JOHN BROWN, announcing the fact to Gov. WISE:

CHARLESTOWN, Dec. 2.

John Brown has been executed. Everything passed off quietly. He was not permitted to speak a word. I will send his remains to Harper's Ferry this evening at 5 o'clock. They will be protected from violence, and will be delivered to his wife. The hour of delivery has been fixed at the request of Mrs. Brown. (Signed) WM. B. TALLIAFERRO, Major General.

MARTIN VAN BUREN.—No Ex-President has ever lived in more studied retirement than MARTIN VAN BUREN. He is seldom away from his home, and never seems to covet attentions of any kind. On the 5th inst. he passed his 77th year. He is said to be writing a memoir of his times. It will, if truthful, reveal a great many curious chapters in the political history of the country.

MILWAUKEE, 1859.

EDITOR MILWAUKEE SENTINEL:—It has been for many years, to me, a matter of surprise that the citizens of Milwaukee have been so seemingly indifferent, and oblivious, even, to the great early improved and most fertile country Southwest of her, in the southern counties of Wisconsin, between Rock River and the Fox, and embracing in widely diverging lines, extending to the Mississippi, a large portion of Northern and North Western Illinois, comprising portions of both States, which have no superior in either.

While every nerve has been stretched to reach the country West and North-West of her by railroads, and lines parallel and near to each have been run in these directions—involving to the minds of the distant observer much injurious outlay of efforts and of money—and while Milwaukee citizens have been active in making the acquaintance of villages and towns of the West and North-West, the rich country to which I have alluded, although earlier settled and more extensively improved and susceptible, as a body, of being made as fine a country as the sun shines upon, has been stretching out her hands in invitation to Milwaukee, unheeded and uncared for. What do the farmers and villagers of the South-West know of the business men of Milwaukee? Nothing, except what they learn in your streets, after miles of toilsome journeying with teams, or by railroads circuitous—starting from their homes, perhaps, in some other direction, and liable to all manner of vicissitudes of railroad connection.

A Milwaukee man is a "rara avis" in the country of which we are speaking. While the hotel books of Prairie du Chien, La Crosse, St. Paul, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Watertown and Janesville probably make daily and hourly entries of Milwaukee names, you will find them few and far between, I opine, on similar registers in the Freeports, the Dixons, the Rock Islands, the Rockfords, the McHenry's and the Woodstocks of your Southwest; and probably the same could be said of Beloit, Delavan, Elkhorn and Burlington; and yet all these places are situated in a country far superior, as a whole, to your North-West.

The villages of Rochester and Waterford, twenty-five to thirty miles south-west of you, are practically farther from Milwaukee today, taking time and comfort of approach both into consideration, than La Crosse and Prairie du Chien, and I dare say, taking all the season through, the farmers in the vicinity of the latter get their produce transported to you at as little cost as those of the former regions.

The writer has dealt with Milwaukee business men probably to the amount of three fourths of one hundred thousand dollars, but of those with whom he has dealt has hardly ever seen a man of them in this region, in an acquaintance of fifteen or twenty years, and the impression derived from acquaintance in Milwaukee in past years is, that it will be difficult ever to make them believe that there is a south-western country, extending from near their doors which is far ahead in all the natural elements of greatness of any same area extending from them in any other direction, and this country, too, has ever been desirous of good neighborhood and good communication with Milwaukee, but has never seemed to get her ear or to reach the estimation to which she has ever been entitled.

Years ago, when Freeport was unheard of and Rockford and Dixon were babies, the writer was aware that intelligent early settlers of that rich region regarded Milwaukee as their most natural outlet, and, from that day to this, the people of the whole region of which I am speaking have wished and hoped for facilities for reaching Milwaukee equal to those to other points. Wherever the facilities of transportation have been equal, Milwaukee has largely divided with Chicago the trade of Northern and North-western Illinois.

It can hardly be otherwise than that good shipping points farthest down the western shore of Lake Michigan, the facilities of reaching them being equal, must have an advantage over other points South on the same shore in commanding the heavy trade of the country equidistant to both; and if you can add to the points first spoken of superior harbor facilities, and arrangements for business commensurate with the flow of trade to them, and, farther, a superior reputation for remunerative prices, it cannot well be but that they must command to a greater extent the fields penetrated by both than their more southern rivals.

It appears to me, Messrs. Editors, that Milwaukee has lost sight of such considerations—considerations which should have shaped earliest Railroad policy—and, in an abject her faithlessness in her own position and powers, has launched her means and her credit, and her whole thought, upon railroads, the aim of which could only be to secure what was already more surely her own; and having neglected at first to throw out her bulwarks to secure the older and more settled portions—her South-west—from her most active rival and aspirant of the trade of the whole great Northwest—that rival, favored by the weakness of Milwaukee's neglect has made her inroads into the State and is running her lines of competition everywhere as if lighted and beaconed—encouraged and invited—by the apprehensive policy which Milwaukee has been pursuing.

This is not the place, nor is the writer the man, to limn out with force the great and varied considerations and bearings that rush to the mind in advancing into reflections of the preceding character. I will not undertake to examine how far this situation of our railroad interests is advancing or retarding the welfare of the whole people of this State. I will not undertake to consider how far the interests of the great mass in a State are advanced or retarded by such an arrangement of internal improvements as shall be calculated most to combine all home interests for the advancement of home interests. Nor will I attempt to consider how far such a combination—adding perhaps to the internal wealth and vigor of a State situated [illegible] ours, would enable her to reach [illegible] ciency and certainty for the com[illegible]th efforts from contiguous State[illegible]mercial benewest—aye and South[illegible]—West and North-or the [illegible]uestions too deep for the place [illegible]r, whatever convincing theories [illegible]y arise at their bare mention, and it is not my purpose to discuss them. But it is not my object—laying aside all other bearings—to enquire if Milwaukee seeks no remedy—wants no remedy—for what I conceive to be her errors of the past.

If she is awakening or can be awakened to her interests, it appears to me she should arise from her supineness and cowardice, or utter oversight, or blindness, with which she has treated her interests as connected with her Southwest.

The energies of her business men and the determination of her people cannot too soon be directed to the retrieving of a country which is still holding out its hands to her.—She cannot too soon determine, by means cheaply and easily in her power, and by arrangements already in a measure secure, to lay hold of her Southwest; to clasp the extended hand and give it such a grasp as shall say "You are our long neglected kindred. We have not known your worth and your long suffering regard, but now we see it—we know it. We want to become acquainted with you, and your sons and your daughters, and with your cousins and cousins' cousins, and through them all with that old 'Father' Mississippi."

Return the compliments of your rival. Let her know that she has an "Africa" to defend, and that you can as rationally expect to carry her "Lower Egypt" as she can expect to hold the fortress of the Winnebago and Superior.

Milwaukee, by a short link, can avail herself of a first class railroad line and connections Southwest, and make connections with numerous Chicago lines, both Southwest and South, the value of which, in future, cannot now be well calculated.

I have reference to the building of the long mooted—often perhaps derided—but illy understood Fox River Valley Railroad, at least, I think, little considered and understood by Milwaukee.

I am a resident on the line of that Road, but the principle of this article is not the same as that of a certain little seven by nine sheet I lately fell in with, which ended all articles, whether grave, grandiloquent, or humorous, with a recommendation, "go buy your goods at SMITH's."

When I have considered the vast Railroad connection this short road would furnish Milwaukee, I have always been astonished at her apathy in regard to it. But my wonder has been recently renewed by my happening along the line of the Rockford and Kenosha R. R., on its western portion. Judge of my surprise in finding it nearly ready for the cars from Rockford to Harvard on the Chicago and St. Paul R. R.,—a point but about fifteen miles from the junction of its line with the line of the Fox River Valley R. R. It has even been stated by the directors of the F. R. V. R. R. that a running connection was reserved by the Rockford interest. If such is the case the completion of the F. R. V. R. R. to Richmond, would give, in addition to a connection with Chicago, which would be beneficial to Milwaukee as a competing route for travel to and from Chicago, and in addition to connections South, aiming at St Louis, and, South-West, to every point to which a Chicago Railroad runs, it would give a Milwaukee line, in reality, to Rockford, and, in contemplation from Rockford to Dixon and Rock Island, to which points I understand the Rockford road is destined to be pushed.

A glance at the map shows this to be a very direct Southwestern route from Milwaukee to Rock Island, and, I should judge, would bring Rock Island about the same distance from Milwaukee as from Chicago, via the Chicago and Rock Island Railroad.

It appears to me there can be no mistake in regard to the importance of the Fox R. V. R. R. to Milwaukee. It must furnish to her—and that cheaply—extensive and most desirable railroad connections.

If ever a connection can be formed with the Racine and Mississippi R. R. west of Racine, by a road from Milwaukee, the Fox R. V. R. R. stands the best chance for such connection; because that road, only, would offer the nearest to an equivalent in return. And, there is not the least doubt, such connection would furnish all the advantages to Milwaukee and points West on the Racine Road,—so far as commercial access is concerned and traveling passage—as a connection through any road, farther West, and any outlay to effect those objects by Milwaukee and points inland on the Racine road, through other channels, is measurably waste outlay—more hopeless in its hopes of the desired connection, because it robs the stock of the Racine road of the advantage of longer agency in transmission, by some twenty miles, while the actual distance to Milwaukee saved is but about two miles, as I suppose has been well and fully demonstrated. Why the Fox R. V. R. R. (the name of which was changed, I believe, to the Milwaukee and Northern Illinois Railroad, by the last meeting of the stock holders, I think wrongfully, for the name that has borne the obloquy should enjoy the final triumph)—I say, why this road, in view of all these advantages should as yet have received little else but neglect and mal-treatment from Milwaukee, I for one should like to have explained. For a long time it was next to impossible to get for it the Milwaukee ear, and when it was partially arrested, that ear was so filled with the din of "Milwaukee and La Crosse"—Milwaukee and Mississippi"—the "Milwaukee and Watertown"—"Milwaukee and Horicon," and "Milwaukee and Superior," and her head was so bewildered with the din, that Milwaukee appeared to comprehend nothing of the value, the beauty and richness of her Southwest, or the importance of any connexion with her.

I remember once to have been one of a self-constituted "committee of two," who visited Milwaukee with the vain hope of drawing attention to the charms of this maid, who was waiting anxiously for the wooing. We were quite unskilled in the matters of Cupid or Cupidity. We selected, as the one thro' whom to walk into the affections of your city, the gallant bachelor then at the head of the city government. We laid before him to the wealth and beauty of our protege, and the value and advantage of a union with her.—The gallant Colonel treated the subject most politely—confessed himself previously taken of the "southwest"—had full faith in her worth—professed his sense of the desirableness of the proposed union—would consult the matter—would consult his friends—and, in fact, we almost felt as though we carried back the Colonel's "hand," but faith it proved nothing but the "mitten," and such, for a long time, appeared to be the result of all advances toward Milwaukee. And when at a later period there was some arousing of the feelings of your people on the subject of the Fox River Valley R. R., the only natural road for accomplishing all that you can expect from a connection southwest; there was so little cool and deliberate and candid attention given the subject, that they suffered themselves to be divided by projects so as to nearly neutralize their efforts; and while the country has been fulfilling her pledges toward the consummation of the desired nuptials, the city has substantially proved faithless.

Citizens of Milwaukee! How long shall this be so? Walk, I beseech you, each one of you, at your earliest convenience, to the office of the Fox River Valley Rail Road Company, in your city. Don't ask to see their books, for you might tear them, or evil them; but put your hands in your "breeches pockets," and straighten up like men anxious for information; square yourselves [illegible] to the maps on the walls—showing the [illegible] line of the road and its connexions, [illegible] and determine if you have not too long been blind to its great importance; and when you have determined this question, as you must, affirmatively—determine, further, that it must no longer hang unfinished, a heavy and crushing burthen upon a few people of your "southwest"—but that it shall and must be completed, and that Milwaukee and her great fertile southwest, shall feel its enlivening benefits; that the rubbish that encumbers it shall be cleared away.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND THE PRESERVATION OF THE UNION.—We have yet to see the first Democratic paper which has uttered one word in condemnation of the denial of the right of Freedom of Speech in the City of Washington.

We have yet to see the first Democratic paper which has uttered one word in condemnation of the treasonable Disunion Resolutions introduced in the South Carolina Legislature.

On the other hand, we read in dozens of Democratic papers apologies for and defences of both these acts—the one of which aims a deadly blow at the existence of the Government, and the other a blow at one of the most important Rights that Government was instituted to secure.

The Democratic Party abets and encourages Disunion and denial of Free Speech.—The Republican party is pledged to preserve both the Union itself and the inalienable Rights of its Citizens.—Albany Journal.

One of the persons arrested at Charlestown on Friday, for venturing within the lines, turned out to be Colonel Baylor, the very man who commanded the Harper's Ferry militia in the attack against Brown. He was highly incensed at the indignity, and when the officer of the guard learned who he was, and directed that he should be set at liberty, he declined to take his liberty, and insisted upon being brought to headquarters, and on receiving from the General a written order of discharge, his indignation found vent in a very free and open expression of his private sentiments in regard to the whole military array. He denounced it as a disunion movement, got up by Henry A Wise, who wanted to be President of a Southern Confederacy. "It is a vile political scheme," said he, "to destroy the Union. The command is given to a near relative of Wise's; many of the officers are related to him, and nine out of every ten men here are his political supporters. The object is to increase the excitement.

After I was superseded in command, he told me to hold myself in readiness for orders. I answered that I would hold myself in readiness to obey Gov. Letcher's orders, but not his. He could not deprive me of my commission, except by court-martialing me, and that he dare not do."

I do not pretend to give Col. Baylor's precise language, but I give the substance of it. He appeared to be considerably excited, and said that though there were more slaves owned by his family than by any other in Virginia, he would rather that slaves, and John Brown and all should escape, that that this Union should be destroyed. His grandfather had fought and bled in the Revolution, and he was not willing to see the Government overthrown for the political advancement of any man. He saw nothing but treason in all this movement. He had heard that white-haired old man, Edmund Ruffin, make a treasonable baraugue in the street to-day, and had gone up and told him that he was protected by his white hairs and by the military; but that if he came here a month hence and made a similar speech, he would be taken down to "the run" and well ducked, and then driven out of town.

DISUNION SENTIMENT.—During the past week there has been an extensive growth of disunion sentiment among the people of Jefferson County, and the avowal of opinions averse to a dissolution of the Union was regarded as treason to the Commonwealth. A better feeling, however, now prevails, and the oppressive reserve which weighed down the entire community, has given way to a freedom of sentiment that is quite refreshing, and the street discussions now include even a combatting of the disunion sentiment. A person who undertook to experiment came out with flying colors, of which the following version is given by one of the Northern correspondents: His opponents in the discussion had declared themselves in favor of an immediate secession and in favor of them compelling the North, by force of arms, to return fugitive slaves. They admitted that there would then be much danger of their slaves running away, because the Fugitive Slave act would be no longer operative; and the only way to remedy that was to declare war against the North, if the slaves were not returned. But this menace was met by the suggestion that while the freemen of the South would be engaged in these hostilities, the slaves, being under no restraint, would avail themselves of the absence of their masters at the wars, to gain their freedom. This was an unanswerable argument. There was no disputing the reasoning. Besides, if the refusal to surrender slaves were a sufficient cause for war, why did not the United States now declare war against England for harboring the five millions' worth of slaves that annually make their way to Canada? For himself he owned ten thousand dollars in slaves, and boasted of being as devoted a Southern man as stood in shoe-leather; but he would rather surrender his property than that this glorious Union should be disturbed.—Baltimore American.

SERVED HIM RIGHT.—The meanest man under the sun is the writer of anonymous slanderous letters. Such a fellow, named Patterson, got caught at the dirty business in Xenia and he got well punished for it. The Xenia Torch Light gives the particulars. The slanderer is named Patterson, and the victim of his libels is a respectable widow lady, who saw it to decline his hand. The Torch Light says:

> These letters were received by her brother, her brother-in-law, the ministers and elders of the church to which she belongs, and some of the vilest by her sister-in-law. The assistance of the Postmaster was sought, and he put a private mark on five postage stamps, four of which were sold to the rascal. In the course of some two or three days two of the four marked stamps which had been sold, came back on letters, one addressed to this widow lady's brother-in-law and the other to her minister, both anonymous and reflecting in the vilest manner upon the lady.
> The scamp was invited to the house of the injured lady yesterday afternoon, where he found congregated several of those who had received his letters. The sight wilted him at once. He denied the writing, but the evidence was against him. He declared that he knew nothing derogatory to the character of the widow, and signed a certificate to that effect.
>
> After this the widow and her sister-in-law each drew a raw-hide, and gave the fellow a flogging. The Torch Light says:
> The ladies performed their part of the affair with a will—welting the scamp's back and head in the most approved style. He took the thrashing—a part of it in the presence of a crowd which had gathered to see the fellow dressed—in the most abject style, begging for mercy from those who were avenging the sneaking outrage he had committed upon them.

THE LOST FOUND.—A few days since a man, about sixty years of age, from New York, made application to the Chief of Police for his assistance in finding a lost daughter, whom he supposed to be in this city. From his story, which he narrated with much feeling, it appeared that his daughter some three years since, then a bright-eyed girl of eighteen, became enamored of a young man of fashionable exterior but dissipated habits, and married him, much against his (the father's) wishes and advice. Vexed at the marriage, he forbid her frequenting the house. Soon after she and her husband left for a city in the State of Ohio, and there settled down. All went "merry as a marriage bell" for a season. At last, however, her husband fell in with bad associates, and his old habits of dissipation returned. Soon she was left to grapple with the world alone; for a while she managed to live by her needle, but the times growing very dull she was unable to obtain constant employment, and left the place of her residence and came to this city. From information which he had lately received, he supposed that she was living in a manner not very creditable. The Chief, after obtaining a full description of her, set one of his force to work to find her, if possible. At last a young woman was found answering to her description, and the father was taken to see her. They no sooner saw each other than a recognition followed. The meeting was most affecting, and the officer very properly left them to themselves. The next day the father and his erring but still handsome daughter left for New York. The father, we learn, occupies a respectable position in that city.—Buff. Express.

BANISHMENT OF A SCHOOL MISTRESS.—Within the last few days, an occurrence took place in one of the young ladies' schools of this city, which shows that even Yankee school-teachers, who come South to make money, cannot keep a discreet tongue in their head. Abolition is in them, and it will gush out one way or another.

In the case in point, some of the young lady scholars were talking over the excitement of Harper's Ferry, and one or more of them expressed an opinion, saying, "Old Brown ought to be hanged." The teacher from down East, who, we understand, gave lessons in music and French, rebuked the young pupils for calling the Kansas murderer and robber "Old Brown," and stated that they should name him as "Mr. Brown," that he was engaged in a meritorious cause, and that he was a good and brave man, whose object was not evil, &c.

The young daughters of the South did not relish this laudation of the old sin-dyed rascal, who would incite, pay and arm negroes, to maltreat or murder them; they made known the expressions of the Yankee teacher to the Principal of the Academy, who, after investigating the matter, immediately discharged the offending teacher. She made tracks for the North the same evening, but will, doubtless, make capital out of the occurrence somewhere down in Maine or Massachusetts, where every feminine, who is just able to spell "c-a-t," thinks she can teach all Southern children.—Richmond Enquirer, Dec. 2.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

What is it? How Cured?

THOUSANDS OF PERSONS HAVE PILES—suffer for years with the disease—yet few know what it is, or how it is cured. Every case of Piles, whether manifested in the form of external tumors, frequent bleeding, or in violent itching and irritation, depends essentially upon congestion of the abdominal venous circulation. This produces the engorgement (dilation of the veins, formation of tumors, hemorrhages, pain and suffering; and the disease can only be fundamentally cured by medicines which, taken internally, relieve this abdominal venous congestion. Hence, ointments, washes, and even injections, are ineffectual. HUMPHREYS' HOMŒOPATHIC PILE SPECIFIC, a simple sugar pill, taken two or three times per day, cures the disease by curing the condition upon which the disease depends. Hundreds have been cured by it, even of the most obstinate cases. All will be promptly benefitted by it. Price 50 cents a box.

N. B.—A full set of HUMPHREYS' HOMŒOPATHIC SPECIFICS, with Book of Directions, and twenty remedies, in large 3-drachm vials, and morocco case, $5; do, in plain case, $4. Family case of fifteen boxes and book, $2.

These remedies, by the single box or case, are sent by mail or express, free of charge, to any address, on receipt of the price. Address,

THE WILL AND THE WAY.

BY PETER COOK.

We have faith in old proverbs, full surely,
For Wisdom has traced what they tell,
And Truth may be drawn up as purely
From them as it may from a well.
Let us question the thinkers and doers,
And hear what they honestly say,
And you'll find they believe, like bold weavers,
In "where there's a will there's a way."

The hills have been high for man's mounting,
The woods have been dense for his ax,
The stars have been thick for his counting,
The floods have been wide for his tracks;
The sea has been deep for his diving,
The poles have been wide for his way,
But bravely he's striven, and striving,
That "where there's a will there's a way."

Have you vices that rule a destroyer?
Or passions that need your control?
Let reason become your employer,
And your body be ruled by your soul;
Fight on, though you bleed in the trial,—
Resist with strength that ye may,
Ye may conquer Sin's host by denial—
For, "where there's a will there's a way."

Have ye poverty's pinching to cope with?
Does suffering weigh down your might?
Only call up a spirit to hope with,
And dawn may come out of the night.
Oh! much may be done by denying
The pleas of despair and disuse,
And much may be gained by relying
On "where there's a will there's a way."

Should ye see afar off that worth winning,
Set out on the journey with trust,
And never heed if your path, at beginning,
Should be among brambles and dust.
Though it may be that by footsteps ye do it,
And hardships may hinder and seem,
Keep a heart, and be sure you'll get through it,
For "where there's a will there's a way."

HOW AN ADVERTISEMENT GOT A WIFE.

From "Once a Week."

"Tobacco is the the tomb of love," writes a modern novelist of high standing; but with every respect for his authority, I beg to say it was quite the contrary in my case.

Twenty-one years ago, I was sitting by my fire-side, totting up innumerable pages of my bachelor's housekeeping-book, taking exercise in arithmetic on long columns of "petty cash"—comprising items for carrots and Bath-bricks, metal tacks and mutton chops—until, tired and wearied, I arrived at the sum total, and jerked the book on the mantel-piece. Nearly at the same time I placed my hand in the pocket of my dressing-gown, drew out a leather case and lit a principe. Well, having lit the principe, I placed my feet on the fender and sighed, exhausted by my long job of domestic accounts. I was then in business—'twas a small wholesale then, 'tis a large one now—yet one morning's totting of carrots and Bath-bricks, of metal tacks and mutton chops, would tire me a thousand times more than twenty-four hours of honest ledger-work. I sighed, but from labor; for to tell you the truth, I had never been in love. Is this to go on forever? thought I, as I took my third whiff, and looked dreamily through the thin smoke as it ascended between me and a large print of the capture of Gibraltar which hung over the chimney-piece. Am I to spend my prime in totting up parsnips, and computing carrots, and comptrolling washing-bills? I sighed again, and in the act, off flew the button of my neck-band, as though some superior power had seasonably sent the accident to remind me of my helplessness.

The button settled the business; though, as it slipped down inside my shirt, and passed with its mother-o'-pearl coldness over my heart, it for a moment threatened to chill my matrimonial resolution. I pitied my own lonely state, and pity, we know is akin to love. But how was the bachelor to be accomplished? Most men at my age would already have adjusted their inclination to some object so that having made up their mind and counted the cost, little more would have remained to be done than to decide upon the day, and lay hold upon the license.—This however, was not the case with me. I had been too much occupied, too idle, or too indolent to devote the time or make the effort to "form an attachment." It was through no disinclination or difficulty to be pleased; for had any young lady of moderately agreeable powers taken the trouble, she might have married me long ere then. I should even have been grateful to her for taking the trouble off my hands, but I was too bashful to adopt the initiative.

I was a bashful man. This weakness came from the same cause as my Uncle Toby's—namely, a want of acquaintance with female society, which want arose from another cause in my case—namely, to close an application to business.

Accordingly I thought of an advertisement; yet with no practical design of doing business, but, as I persuaded myself, for a joke. So I scratched with a pencil on the back of a letter, the following:

WANTED A WIFE.—None but principals need apply. The advertiser does not require cash, but only a companion. He is six-and-twenty, and, tired of single, he thinks he can settle down to married life. As men go, he believes he has a moderate share of temper, and want of time is his only reason for having recourse to the newspapers. He has enough means for himself and a second party, and is willing to treat at once. He is quite aware that a great many attempts to convert his honest intentions into an extravagant joke will be made, but he warns all rash intruders. If he finds a man hardy enough to make sport of his affections, he will thrash him—if a woman, he will forgive her. He has a heart for the sincere, a horsewhip for the impertinent. In either case, all applications will be promptly attended to, if addressed to P. P., to the office of this paper

I felt proud of my composition, and puffed away my principe with a vague glee and anticipation of something coming out of it. I had no very great idea that anything but fun would result; and I certainly had not the slightest notion of involving myself in a personal collision with any one. Still the presentiment that it was not destined to be all a barren joke, pressed upon me. On Saturday the advertisement appeared, and I heard its style unanimously by all my friends, and it was jokingly suggested by more than one, that I was the domestically destitute individual that put it forth.

On Monday morning I sent a boy to the newspaper office for P. P.'s letters. I expected he might be followed by some curious and inquisitive persons; so I told him on his way back to call at a bachelor neighbor's of mine for a book. The trick told.—The lad was followed by some persons who never lost sight of him until they ran him to my friend's, and then they went back and announced that he was the advertiser. I thus discharged in full one or two practical jokes which my neighbor had played upon me.—The answers were of the usual character—several seeking to elicit my name, and still more suggesting places of meeting, where I was to exhibit myself with a flower in my button hole and a white handkerchief in my hand. One only looked like business. It was from a lady, who proposed an interview in a neighboring city, about forty miles north. She said there was something so frank and straightforward in my advertisement, that she was convinced it was real, and she could rely upon my keeping her name secret, if after we met nothing came of the meeting. She would, therefore, see me at the ——, at ——, on a certain day, and if mutual approbation did not follow the interview, why there was no harm done.

Most people would have put this down as a trap to give me a journey for nothing. I did not. A presentiment impelled me to accept and keep the engagement.

This was in the old coaching days, when a man had time to make an acquaintance in every forty miles, not as now, when you are at your journey's end before you have looked round your company in a railway carriage. There were but two inside—myself and a pleasant, talkative, honest faced elderly gentleman. Shy and timid in female society, I was yet setdemed, animated and agreeable enough among my own sex. We had no trouble, therefore, in making ourselves agreeable to one another; so much so, that as the coach approached G——, and the old gentleman learned that I meant to stop there that night, he asked me to waive the ceremony and have a cup of tea with him after I had dined at my hotel. My "fair engagement" was not till next day, and, as I liked the old gentleman, I accepted his offer.

After my pint of sherry, I brushed my hair and went in search of my coach companion and my promised cup of tea. I had no difficulty in finding him out, for he was a man of substance and some importance in the place. I was shown into the drawing-room. My old friend received me heartily, and introduced me to his wife and five daughters! "All spinsters, sir," said he, "young ladies whom an undiscriminating world seems disposed to leave upon my hands."

"If we don't sell, papa," said the eldest, who, with her sisters, seemed to reflect her father's fun, "it is not for want of puffing, for all your introductions are advertisements."

At the mention of this last word, I felt a little discomposed, and almost regretted my engagement for the next day, when that very night, perhaps, my providential opportunity had arrived.

I need not trouble my readers with all our sayings and doings during tea; suffice it to say that I found them a very pleasant, friendly family, and was surprised to find I forgot all my shyness and timidity, encouraged by their good-tempered ease and conversation. They did not inquire whether I was married of single, for where there were five young unmated daughters, the question might seem invidious. I, however, in the freedom of the moment, volunteered the information of my bachelorhood; I thought I had no sooner communicated the fact than the girls passed round a glance of arch intelligence from one to the other. I cannot tell you how odd I felt at the moment.—My sensations were between pleasure and confusion, as a suspicion crossed my mind, and helped, I felt, to color my cheek. Presently, however, the eldest, with an assumed indifference which cost her an effort, asked where I was staying.

"At the——hotel," I answered with some embarrassment.

It was with difficulty she restrained a laugh; they bit their lips, and I had no longer a suspicion—I was certain. So, after having some music, when I rose to depart I mustered courage, as I bid them good bye, to say aside to the eldest:

"Shall P. P. consider this the interview?"

A blush of conscious guilt, I should rather say innocence, told me I had sent my random arrow to the right quarter; so I pressed the matter no further at that moment, but I did her hand.

I remained in at my hotel next day, until an hour after the appointed time, but no one made their appearance. "Then," thought I, brushing my hair and adjusting my cravat, "since the mountain will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet must go to the mountain;" so I walked across to my old friends. The young ladies were all in. The eldest was engaged with some embroidery at the window. I had therefore an opportunity, as I leant over the frame, to whisper:

"S. S. is not punctual."

The crimson in her face and neck was now to deep, that a skeptic himself would no longer doubt. I need say no more; that evening in her father's garden, she confessed that she and her sisters had conspired to bring me up to G—— on a fool's errand, never meaning of course, to keep the engagement.

"Then," said I, "since you designed to take me in, you must consent to make me happy!"

"And what did she say, papa?" asked my second daughter, who is now looking over my shoulder as I write.

"Why, you little goose, she promised to be your mama, and she has kept her word."

HIGHWINES—Highwines are quiet with small sales at 22c ½ gallon. Alcohol is still lower, with sales at 32@ 34c ½ gallon.

PROVISIONS—The provision market is firm and moderately active. We note sales of 400 bbls mess pork, in two lots at $15; 3000 bbls in four lots at 15@15, to be delivered in 7 January; a lot of green shoulders at 5½c; mess beef at 7,00 extra; mess at $ 9 00; and lard at 10c. $600 ℔ bbl was offered for 500 bbls mess pork, and the offer accepted.—Times.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 8th.—There was a partial stampede in the pork market to-day, caused by—we can hardly say what, but there was a stampede, a decline and a rush to sell, for a while. The receipts were larger than expected, about 9,000 head, and would have been some 5,000 more, but for the detention of trains on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, and Kentucky Central roads. The weather, too, was extremely cold and frozen hogs were in hand to some extent, lately in that way about 2,000 head sold at 4½c for cut light to 4½ for extra heavy. On change the depression was greater, and sales were made at 4½ to 4½ for 200 lb averages, and at the close it was saying 190 lbs sold at 4½@4½. This was the lowest point reached. In the afternoon there was a slight recovery, and about 900 head, averaging 200 lbs, brought 4½ 50, closing at 4½ 50 to 4½ 00 for averages of 190 to 220 lbs. There was a disposition to hold off to see how receipts run for the next 48 hours. The result will put the market up or down. In anticipation of the decline in hogs, provisions were put upon the market freely in the afternoon, and 2,000 brls mess pork sold at $16 50 to $16 75; and 800,000 lbs bulk meats, for January and February delivery at 6 and 5c for shoulders and sides. At close, mess pork was offered freely at $16 ½, without buyers. The decline on both meats was 3c from the highest point. At close, however, the feeling was somewhat better, with sales at 5¼ and 5¾c packed, on the spot. Some lots were taken at these figures for the Southeast. Lard closed nearly declined to 5c for hams, and 5c for shoulders, and late in the day a further decline was contended for on the former. Country hams are offering pretty freely, and these will ship east, keep curers more than supplied — Lard was also easier; 600 brls sold at 10½c, and one or

From the Indianapolis Journal, 7th.

Owing to the rainy weather, the receipts of hogs have been comparatively light. To-day has been the only really good time for packing for a week past, and it will be several days yet before hogs will arrive plentifully. Under the influence of small receipts prices advanced, and we quote to-day $6 for hogs weighing 200 of 250 lbs. This is fully up to Cincinnati and Louisville prices, deducting the cost of transportation—figures which our packers intend to sustain during the season. There is every indication that the season will be prolonged to a late day in the Winter.

Corn is plentiful, and pays the producer well when turned into pork at 6c per lb. Hogs not fit for market will be fed until they are, and lots not intended for sale some weeks ago, are now undergoing the forcing process with a view to bring them on the market as soon as they can be made ready.

The establishments of W. & I. Mansur, Mansur & Ferguson, and I. McTaggart etc, had packed up to last evening some 9,000 hogs. By saturday evening these same houses will have packed 12,000 more, and other packers operating on a limited scale will have packed 1,000 or 2,000 more—making altogether 23,000 or 24,000 hogs packed in Indianapolis by the 10th inst. This is but about 9,000 less than the total number packed during the entire period of last year, and tends to show that the crop for the present year will not be short, as was anticipated some time ago.

From the St. Louis Democrat.

The receipts of hogs are increasing considerably, yet a fair prospect exists for a short crop so far as this point is concerned. One of our largest houses could, without difficulty, till every hog received in St. Louis. Some activity was exhibited at the packing houses to-day, the weather turning warmer, and a number of droves were passing through the streets. Receipts by river and railroad in the 48 hours ending at noon to-day, were 4,141 head, reckoning 60 to a car—the number by river is about the same as by railroad. Considerable numbers are also drove in. Six days' receipts, or since last Tuesday, by river and railroad, reached 12,865 head. By river from 1st to 7th inst. in November, 6,830 in December, 8,961 in September, and 15,86 in August. The number killed at five of the St. Louis packing houses with which we have not yet having commenced is 17,156 head, as follows:

Ashbrook & Co	7,000
Francis Whitaker & Co	2,368
M. Steitz	1,100
John J. Roe & Co	3,500
C. & G. Baynes	3,200
Total	17,156

Mr. Roe has some 1,500 over in the pens, but the others are few or none left, except what arrive this evening, showing that only some 25,000 head have come in since packing commenced. Ashbrook killed 1,500 head to-day, and Messrs. Whitaker, Seitz and Roe each killed 2,000 each; they will finish packing the previous day's slaughter. These houses are in readiness to do a large business; they have, generally, well ventilated and roomy houses, with all the modern facilities for killing, preparing and packing meat.—They are paying good prices, and some think the market likely to be glutted with hogs at such rates. Sales to-day comprise about 1,200 in lots, including 200 at 5c net, dividing on 100 lbs; 200 at 5¾, 5¾ and 6c, dividing on 150 and 200 lbs; 200 at 6c to average 200 lbs; 400 to 500 at about same rates.

In hog products a few sales are made, but most packers here hold aloof it is fully known whether there is a good or short crop. Only mess pork sold Saturday at $16 per brl., at which it is firm to-day. M. O. is not in so much demand, and only $14 50 offered for it; held at $14 62½. Nor is prime selling so high in proportion. Sales to-day include 200 brls prime, at 10¾@10¾c—city rendered; 10c exclusive of packages was offered for a lot of keg lard, equivalent to 10½c. Bulk meat is worth 6@6¼c for shoulders, and 8c for hams and sides.

ALBANY HALL.

BAZAAR OF ALL NATIONS.

THIS FESTIVAL, UNDERTAKEN BY the members of the Unitarian Society, for the fund of currency, is presented to the public and to the friends of religious progress. Aside from the charitable objects of the object, the managers are determined to render the entertainment useful, nearly as it is to be attractive, and have prepared no labor or expense toward perfecting the several departments.

The various nations will be represented by ladies and gentlemen of our city, in appropriate costumes, who will exercise the articles of use and ornament, peculiar to the various nationalities.

An especial opportunity is afforded those who may desire presents for the approaching holidays, as articles are offered for sale from the Old World and Orient, with especial reference to this object, and will be sold at prices as low as can be obtained in any store in the city. Besides these, there are several beautiful Aquaria, completely stocked with animal and vegetable life, forming one of the most interesting exhibitions of the kind ever before attempted in our city.

The decoration of the Hall has been entrusted to competent hands, and exceeds in beauty and effect anything of the kind ever before attempted in our city.

The attractions of the Bazaar will be increased by the attendance of of the American Cornet Band, with its full complement of instruments, and will perform each evening, a choice selection of national airs.

The entire proceeds of the entertainment will be still further devoted towards relieving the suffering of the poor, wherever they may be found, and without regard to religious denomination.

The Bazaar will open on Monday evening, the 5th of December, and will continue every evening during the week.

Tickets, twenty-five cents; Season Tickets, one dollar, may be obtained at the Hotels, Book and Music stores, and at the door. dec7
